Dental Care

By the time a cat or dog is 4 years old, 85% show signs of periodontal disease. Keeping your pet's oral hygiene up to par with regular exams by your veterinarian can greatly reduce their risk factors for dental disease. Oral health is so important because chronic infection in the mouth can lead to serious problems. Pain, bad breathe, excessive drooling and potentially tooth loss can all be consequences of untreated dental disease. Chronic oral infections can also lead to damage to vital organs such as the liver, kidneys, heart and other serious health problems. Avoidable disease and pain for your pet is easy! Just schedule yearly exams with your veterinarian and we'll keep your beloved pets teeth healthy! Ask your veterinarian to grade your pet's teeth during an examination. We grade the teeth from 1-4. This helps us to determine the severity of the dental disease. If you notice any of the above issues mentioned here, please schedule an exam for your pet.
